PRESIDENT WARMLY WELCOMED TO ALABAMA Brotherhoods Challenge Board's Authority

UNIONS WELCOME TESTS IN COURTS, LEE DECLARES AT SESSION OF PARLEY

Issue of Peace or War Hangs Sharply in Balance—Today

BOARD DECLINES TO CONSIDER WAGE CUT

This Position May be Basis for Statement of Controversy

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—A virtual challenge of the authority of the United States railway labor board to order the threatened railroad strike called off or even to investigate the strike was hurled by W. G. Lee, president of the brotherhood of railway trainmen at the first session of the peace conference here today. Lee intimated that the brotherhoods were willing to have the authority of the labor board to intervene in the present controversy tested in the courts.

"It is our understanding of the law that after the board has heard a dispute and made a decision it is the privilege of either party to accept or reject the decision. As we understand it, it was the privilege of the men to leave the service if they felt unwilling to accept the board's wage cut decision," Lee said.

The issue of peace or war hung sharply in the balance. War talk came from the camps of the railway executives. The heads of the railroads saw no cause of elation in the statement of the labor board late yesterday that no petition for wage cuts would be acted upon by the board until all controversies regarding working rules are adjusted.

After a conference the executives reiterated their determination to ask the board immediately for a further cut of 10 per cent in the wages of railway employees.

"If present wages are to be continued rates cannot be reduced. If rates are to be reduced, present wages cannot be paid," said a statement issued by the executives.

It seemed certain today that the test would come through the attitude of the unions toward the board. If the unions consider the statement of the labor board that no further wage reductions will be considered, sufficient warrant for calling off the strike, the walkout scheduled for October 30 will be averted.

CAPITAL OPTIMISTIC

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Firm in their belief that the railroad labor board's anti-strike conference in Chicago today marked the beginning of the end in the present menacing railway wage controversy, high officials of the government awaited the outcome with the same optimism they have shown since the plan for the walkout was announced.

Opinions were expressed privately that it would be foolhardy for the brotherhood chiefs to go ahead with their strike plans in the face of the board's flat declaration that there is no possibility of the consideration of any wage reductions during the next few months. Attention was called to the fact that the brotherhoods had virtually accepted the latest wage cut ordered by the board and that the impending walkout was based partially on the announced intention of the railroad heads to demand additional decreases in the rates of pay.

In any eventuality the government is prepared to proceed through the courts, if necessary, to prevent a general tie-up of transportation. The legal program determined upon by the United States district attorneys, called here by Attorney General Daugherty, has been communicated to federal prosecutors throughout the country.

Many Will Get Sample Copy of Sunday's Daily

Sample copies of the Sunday issue of The Daily on October 30 will be sent to all rural route boxes served by the local postoffice. The extra distribution of that issue will make of it an unusually attractive advertising medium.

The Daily believes that the rural residents of this section will appreciate the Sunday Daily and it is making this effort toward the end that its circulation may be built up in the counties of Morgan, Lawrence and Limestone counties.

Local merchants are taking advantage of the special distribution of papers to offer a number of unusual bargains for next week.

REVA F. DIX IS CALLED BY DEATH

A death that shocked his friends, despite his ninety years of age, was that of Rev. A. F. Dix, who yesterday afternoon at 4:20 breathed his last at the home of his son, Paul Dix, in Decatur. The deceased came here some months ago and made his home with his sons, T. M. and Paul Dix. Owing to his advanced years, Rev. Dix had naturally become acquainted with only a limited number of people, but due to his lively interest in affairs generally and his attractive personality, he endeared himself to all who knew him.

The funeral party for Rev. Dix left this morning for Montgomery, where the deceased will have funeral services from the First Baptist church this afternoon. As shown by following biography of him, Rev. Dix was a Confederate soldier, although he grew to manhood and married in the state of New York. His activities as a teacher and minister of the Gospel are also noted.

Alexander Franklin Dix was born at Wilson, New York, July 27th, 1831, spending his boyhood on his father's farm, and received his education in the common schools of his county, later attending the University of Rochester and the State Normal College at Albany, N. Y. He came South in 1859, locating at Union Springs, Ala., where he taught for a year at Woodlawn Seminary, going from there to Midway, Ala. He returned to New York and was married on January 2, 1861, to Miss Helen Beach, coming back to Midway, where he was engaged in teaching until the war began. He enlisted as a private in Company E, 1st Battalion of Hillierds Legion, which later became the 59th and 60th Alabama Regiment and the 23rd Alabama Battalion of Sharpshooters. He served in the latter command until the close of the war, under General Bragg in Kentucky, and later in the Army of Northern Virginia where he surrendered with General Lee.

He returned to Midway in 1865 and resumed teaching. He was ordained to the Baptist ministry April 18, 1869, and continued his work of teaching and preaching at Winchester, Tenn., 1871 to 1880; at Stevenson, Ala., 1880 to 1883; at Union Springs, Ala., 1883 to 1887, discontinuing teaching then and removing to Pine Grove, Ala., where he devoted his entire time to preaching until his removal to Montgomery, Ala., in 1897, where he lived until 1918, when he went back to Pine Grove, Ala., to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Hall. He moved from there to Decatur, where he spent his last days at the home of his son, celebrating his ninety-third birthday on July 27th.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. M. Hall, of Pine Grove, Ala.; four sons, L. D. Dix, of Mobile, Ala.; Philo C. Dix, of Louisville, Ky.; Paul F. Dix and T. M. Dix, of Decatur, and quite a number of grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

CONFIDENCE VOTE GIVEN LEADERS AS ROPER EXPLAINS CRAFT'S POSITION

Shopmen Will Await Decision of Labor Board, Leader Says

CRAFTS WILL JOIN IN ARMISTICE CELEBRATION

Largely Attended Meeting Held Last Night at the Masonic Theater

Mammoth correctly describes the crowd that assembled last night at the Masonic Theatre to hear S. E. Roper, System Chairman of the Louisville and Nashville Shop Crafts, and W. H. Wilson, General Chairman of the Louisville and Nashville Boiler Makers Union. Agreement in opinion rightly describes the way in which the hundreds of workers accepted the propositions submitted by their leaders. One decision made of general interest, outside of Mr. Roper's deliverance on the present strike situation, was that the craftsmen join wholeheartedly in the proposed Armistice Day celebration set for November 11. The sentiment prevailed that as the railroad management had not in the past objected to a wholesale attendance on special days, that it would raise no objection to the workers being off in celebration of the defeat of the German armies.

Stands by August Declaration

In speaking of the attitude of the 10 or 12 railroad crafts as regards the present rail strike threat, Mr. Roper said that the declaration made during August last by B. M. Jewell and his associates, namely, that the shop crafts would await the final rulings of the National Wage Board before deciding on their course was the watch word and program. He said that the shop crafts were not to be swept off their feet at this time. This sentiment was heartily cheered, and later a unanimous vote of confidence was given Mr. Roper in the stand he had taken as the spokesman of the craftsmen of the Louisville and Nashville system.

The major portion of the addresses of the two speakers was taken up with reading and discussing the rules and working conditions as up to the present provided by the National Railway Wage Board, and as previously agreed to by the railroad managers and the general chairmen of the several crafts. Messrs. Roper and Wilson left last night for points South on the Louisville and Nashville system, and expect to get as far as Mobile before Saturday night. Messrs. Bristol and West, respectively, general chairmen for the Louisville and Nashville Machinists and Carmen, are visiting unions in Tennessee and will end their week's work in Birmingham Saturday night.

Mr. Monnyhan, of the Blacksmiths, and Mr. Wilder, of the Electricians, are speaking this week in Kentucky. As S. E. Roper is general chairman of the system Sheet Metal Workers in addition to being chairman for the system federation, he is speaking also for the Sheet Metal Workers. At the close of last night's meeting he held a special conference with the local union of this craft.

Final Efforts to Defeat Road Bond Issue Finally Prove Unavailing

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 26.—Final efforts of the opposition to defeat the submission of the twenty-five million dollar highway bond issue to the voters were defeated in the House of Representatives Tuesday when 74 members, or ten more than the majority of 64 required by the constitution, voted to concur in the amendment made by the Senate. This eliminated struck out the guarantee of three hundred thousand dollars to each county and substitute a guarantee of one quarter of a million dollars. Only nine members of the House voted against concurrence in the Senate amendment. Leading the opposition were J. Lee Long, of Butler, and Carnley, of Coffee, who led the legislative blockade which held up legislation in the House for several days at the beginning of the session.

As soon as the Senate amendment to the bond bill came before the House as a special order Tuesday Mr. Long, of Butler, opposed concurrence, contending that the members adopted an amendment increasing the guarantee to three hundred thousand dollars only a few days ago and should show enough backbone to insist upon this guarantee remaining in the bill. He mildly criticised those who deserted the legislative blockade, saying that the proper punishment will be recorded in the future political history of Alabama.

Mr. Carnley followed Mr. Long in an address in which he urged all persons in the blockade to vote against the acceptance of the Senate amendment. He challenged critical statements of those favoring the bill as it came from the Senate which contended that the blockaders were against the bond issue. He said the blockaders were for the bond issue but decided that a blockade of other legislation was their only hope of abolishing the tax adjusters.

W. J. Danaby, of Choctaw, delivered a warm address in reply to Mr. Long, of Butler, and Mr. Carnley, in which he charged that those opposing concurrence in the Senate amendment were against the bond issue in any form. He urged the House not to follow the lead of those who were opposed to the measure in its entirety.

Oscar L. Tompkins, of Houston, appealed to the House to concur, stating that today probably was the last opportunity to submit the bond issue as many members will not return to Montgomery after the trip to Birmingham to meet President Harding and that in all probability the necessary 64 votes could not be obtained at any other time.

J. W. Partridge, of Franklin, also urged a favorable vote on the Senate amendment, stating that under it every county in Alabama, large or small, was guaranteed a quarter of a million dollars and that he had sufficient faith in the patriotism of the highway commission to believe that it would equitably apportion all other funds among the various counties. He insisted that the members of the House should think more of the interests of the entire state than the interests of their own counties in such a matter.

Mr. Long, of Butler, arose in his seat again and charged that the Senate amendment was merely an effort of the highway commission to "ram down the throats of the members a guarantee of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars." He insisted that no speaker had made an argument in favor of a reduction of the amount of the guarantee and charged that the main question was whether or not the members of the House would become jelly-fish.

Alfred M. Tunstall, of Hale, speaking for the bond issue bill, told the House he regarded the bond issue as a joke when the bill was first proposed in 1919 but that he had now learned that the people are demanding good roads, that they are determined to have good roads and that it is necessary that the legislature submit the amendment again if it is to meet the wishes of a great majority of the people.

He said he voted for the amendment guaranteeing each county $300,000 but he was willing to accept a guarantee of $250,000 rather than have the bond bill defeated.

Speaker S. A. Lynne took the floor in support of concurrence in the Senate amendment and told the House that the great question is whether or not the legislature will follow the wishes of nine-tenths of the people of Alabama, who expressed themselves in certain terms at the polls on the previous bond issue, and whether it is best to obtain the $25,000,000 from the federal government at a loss of $50,000 guarantee to each county or enforce a guarantee of $300,000 and lose the federal government's appropriation.

Mr. Lynne commended the loyalty and patriotism shown by members of the legislature since they assembled in 1919 and said he knew the House well enough to believe that a great majority would vote again to submit this amendment to the voters. He declared the members are not voting for or against the amendment itself but are doing no more than saying whether or not they are willing to trust the people to decide the question of a bond issue for themselves.

Thomas E. Orr, of Marshall, closed the debate in support of the Senate amendment. He answered the charge that a state bond issue is not necessary to match the federal appropriation by presenting a statement from A. E. Loder, federal district highway engineer, which showed that the state now needs $3,250,000 to match federal appropriations now available.

On concurrence in the Senate amendment, which gave a complete victory to those favoring the submission of the highway bond amendment, the members of the House voted as follows:

For Senate Amendment: Mr. Speaker, Adams, Albright, Alexander, Allen, Andrews, Arnold, Austin, Baker, Blunt, Bracken, Burleson, Calvert, Clett, Cobbs, Collins, Crump, Dancy, Deese, Dodson, Dunaway, Edwards (Dallas), Ellis (Bullock), Ellis (Elmore), Fletcher, Fuller, Gilbert, Gilbreath, Green, Hall, Hale, Hare, Harrison, Hawkins, Hollis, Holmes, Howle, Ingram Jones (Escambia), Jones (Marengo), Johnson, Lawson, Long (Sumter), Matthews (Wilcox), Milford, Mitchell, Moore, Murphree, McDonald, Oakley, Oliver, Orr, Parker, Partridge, Pittman, Reynolds, Robertson, Russell, Salter, Seale, Shaw, Simpson, Smith, Sparks, Stewart, Tompkins, Thammell, Truss, Tunstall, Van de Graaff, Varner, Waddell, Wilson, Woodard.

Against Senate Amendment: Barganier, Carnley, Clayton, Downs, Guy, Lee (Perry), Long (Butler), McLeod, Williamson.

FRANK MESSAGE ON 'RACE QUESTION' BY CHIEF EXECUTIVE IN CENTENNIAL SPEECH

In Heart of Democratic South Mr. Harding Explains His Position

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY WELCOMED BY THROG

Heads Civic Parade Through the Streets of Birmingham. Reviews It

By GEORGE A. HOLMES International News Service Staff Correspondent (International News Service)

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 26.—"Harding's in town." Twenty-one guns boomed a noisy welcome to America's chief executive as he stepped from the presidential train upon its arrival here at the terminal station from Washington at 8:45 o'clock this morning.

Accompanying the President was Mrs. Harding and Senator Oscar Underwood, Secretary of War Weeks, Secretary of the Interior Fall, Secretary George B. Christian, Congressman E. D. Almon, Brigadier General Sawyer, secret service operatives and newspaper men.

After meeting Alabama's 67 most beautiful women, elected queens from their respective localities to the semi-centennial celebration, in the rotunda of the station, the President and Mrs. Harding left the depot, stepped into automobiles and were driven to reception headquarters at the Tutwiler hotel. There the President was introduced to members of the state legislature and delivered a short address.

President Harding endeavored to explain to the folks that he did not wish to be looked upon as a Republican President, but rather as an American President.

"It is as much my duty to serve the people of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi as it is to serve the people of Ohio, New York or Montana. I wish it understood that I am not a Republican in the sense that a party man was once looked upon, but rather an American with party politics as a secondary matter," Mr. Harding says.

The President declared that the country is passing through an era of reconstruction and declared that "it behooves every man to do his part in bringing conditions back to normal."

Following the address the President and Mrs. Harding were escorted to automobiles and headed a civic parade through the business section of Birmingham. Returning to reception headquarters at 11 o'clock the President reviewed the parade from the balcony of the hotel and then was driven to Woodrow Wilson park where he was welcomed to Alabama by Governor Kilby and then introduced formally to citizens of Birmingham by S. J. Bowie, chairman of the semi-centennial committee.

Straight into the heart of the Democratic South with its millions of negroes, President Harding came today with a frank and stirring message dealing with the race problem.

The time has passed, the President said, when the problem of race is of concern only to the South, or even to the United States. It has now become a world problem, he declared, and he suggested that it can best be dealt with by recognizing these fundamentals:

1—That the negro be accorded equal opportunity in matters of politics, business and education, and

2—That there be absolute divergence racially and socially, each with its own traditions, ideals, etc.

"Surely," said the President, "we shall gain nothing by blinking at the facts, by refusing to give a thought to them. That is not the American way of approaching such issues."

President Harding spoke to a great audience of Southerners gathered in

WHEN THIS IS DONE—

When a good road, passable throughout the entire year, passes through every community; when a good comfortable school house is erected in every community contiguous to this good road; when sufficient school interest is aroused in each community that its patrons will see to the comfort and convenience of teacher and pupils; when more stress is laid upon the preparation of the mind of the young, than upon the muscle; when interest is sufficiently aroused to the raising of fine girls and boys, and not exceeded by the interest shown in fine hogs and cattle; when more appropriations are made for public schools of the land, than funds to combat the boll-weevil; when not so much theory is required of the young, than practical application of what they do know, then will the country be said to be upon a solid upward grade, that no impediment or difficulty thrown in the way can impede. When this day arrives, there will be more young men and women content to spend their time on the farm, and not be enticed by the glitter and glare of lights and chaffy stuff that contribute not much to the great idea of upbuilding every nook and corner of this grand old state.

And lastly, when community interest is sufficiently aroused that the young may be afforded entertainment of a character that is really entertaining and uplifting, the young of the rural communities will be content to live where most of the great men of the country came from, the country districts.

When nations, towns, cities and communities have no ideal up to which they may climb, they begin a retrograde movement that is always disastrous.

The history of the last few years made by Americans, furnishes ideals up to which the youth of the land can climb, and if heeded, will make a stronger and better citizenship.

The fellow who believes in himself and will allow nothing to come into his life to make him doubt himself, even though he is poorly equipped mentally and financially, will eventually leave his impression in the world as he goes along.

Supply and demand is the only tribunal that the farmer can carry his burdens to and be assured of a patient hearing and remedial measures carried out for a larger share of profits that should be his. Most all other industries can go to a tribunal of record and get a raise if they can but make the proper showing—and they can always make it.

All the rungs of the ladder of success are not gained at a single bound; else there would have been no use for the rungs. The process is rung by rung until the summit is reached, and when this is accomplished, practical experience will be yours, and you will be equipped for the duties of life.

Education consists not merely in learning what the text books say, but it goes further than that; there must be the ability to put into practical application in every day life what we have learned therein.

Many a fellow when he gives you the assurance that he will take care of you and your interests, is in many instances furnishing you food for lasting remembrance, and possibly strong regret.

We search every day for the angel of contentment and miss him, because he is hiding in the corner of a sick friend's room we have failed to visit, or is crouched in the closet of a neighbor adversity hangs heavy over.

Community interest is nothing more than a solidifying of the combined efforts of that community in good and useful things that tend toward the uplift and entertainment of that particular section.

He who can go out these beautiful October mornings and not be impressed with the fact that he is here for a purpose, and get inspiration from the beauties of Nature all about him, is slow of conception, and fails to grasp a great truth.

This place we spend our earthly life in, is a place as we go along to acquire those valuable things that we know are right, stopping here and there as occasion presents itself to do some act of kindness, and helpfulness if need be, if it be possible for us to do so.

The idea that we have, by our actions, that this is a field simply to acquire large means to satisfy the greed for gain, is wrong, and there are strong admonitions against it.

He who has the former conception of life will be worth a great deal to his fellowmen as he goes along, filled with satisfaction to the brim; and when he enters the lane of life that leads to its sunset, can look back with the satisfaction that he has done his best.

A strong argument for good roads and more of them is seen in the fact that two mules now haul with all ease twelve to fourteen bales of cotton, where formerly only two bales were transported with the same power. It would not take a century at this saving on this one item alone to construct a nice stretch of highway passable the entire year, in this good country.

Around the twinkling stars that hang as jewels in the canopy above, infinity begins and finite minds fail.

Buildings have been erected that lasted for a generation, and structures of empires have lasted throughout the centuries; but they who fabricate Christian character weave that indestructible something that lasts throughout eternity.

You simply cannot down a fellow that will face discouragements with a smile. If at all it will only be temporarily, and if he smiles he will come again stronger than before and battle his way forward.

They who build for the future, are making it possible that even greater attainments may be had for those who follow after.

When the idle learn that farming is an avocation, and not merely a place to work when nothing else can be found to do, then will agriculture take her proper place among the great business interests of this country.

Honest and sincere effort will dispel doubt.

We spend millions for food for the body, while the mind, the real dynamo of the body starves for the want of it.

Until states, cities, towns and communities do their very best in the way of making provision that the young of today may be equipped for meeting the problems of tomorrow, when they take up the responsibilities of life, they will fail to do what is their bounden duty.

The reason for the continued good health of some children is simple enough

Especially when you know the facts, some of which are given here

EVERY mother is proud of a healthy, strong youngster that radiates buoyant life and energy. She has reason to be proud, because the child's good health proves her wisdom in the selection of the food she gives her boy or girl.

All mothers should know that growing children require a balanced diet, a diet containing the food elements needed for building and energizing the little body.

Grape-Nuts, the rich, nourishing food made from whole wheat flour and malted barley, served with milk or cream, contains the materials the child needs for its best growth and development.

Grape-Nuts helps make sound teeth, strong nerves and pure red blood, and for the palate there is nothing more wholesome or delicious.

Go to your grocer today and get a package of strength-giving Grape-Nuts. Let the children have all they want, with milk, cream or stewed fruit, or made into an appetizing pudding. Grape-Nuts is a food that will be relished by every member of the family.

Oklahoman Praises Black-Draught,
Having Used It "Can Safely
Say for 50 Years."

Grandfield, Okla.—One of the best known farmers of Tillman County, Mr. G. W. Tisdale, who owns and manages a wagon yard here, says:

"I have used Theford's Black-Draught—I believe I can safely say for fifty years.

"I was born and reared in Texas, Freestone County, sixty-four years ago. I have been married forty-four years. My father used Black-Draught before I was married, and gave it to us. . . . "For forty-four years of my married life, it has had a place on our medicine shelf, and is the only laxative, or liver medicine, we use. We use it for torpid liver, sour stomach, headache, indigestion. . . . I don't think we could get along without it, knowing what it has done for us, and the money it has saved. It is just as good and reliable today as it was when we began its use. My boys use it and they are satisfied it's the best liver medicine they have ever used."

Theford's Black-Draught is purely vegetable, not disagreeable to take and acts in a prompt and natural way.

So many thousands of persons have been benefited by the use of Theford's Black-Draught, you should have no hesitancy in trying this valuable old well-established remedy, for most liver and stomach disorders. NO-139b.

WOMEN VOTERS SEE LEGISLATORS

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 26—Soon after about twenty-five local women voters had swooped down on the Alabama legislature to start agitation in favor of laws more favorable to women in Alabama, bills were introduced in both houses of the Alabama legislature, proposing an amendment to the constitution which would "abrogate common law disabilities" of the females in this state. Senator Teasley introduced the bill, proposing the amendment in the Senate, while Representative Bargainer sponsored it in the House. Both live in Montgomery.

It is considered very doubtful if the bill is passed upon at the special session of the legislature. The life of this session is limited, and both houses are working hard and fast to bring an end to the session this week. The bill proposes to let the voters decide whether the constitution shall be amended. The constitutional amendment bill provides that: "Women shall have the same rights, privileges and immunities under the law as men, with respect to the exercise of suffrage, holding of office, freedom of contract, grounds for divorce, becoming parties litigant, ownership and control of labor and earnings, etc." The bill would abrogate in every respect the common law disabilities of the women of Alabama.

THERE IS VIGOR IN RICH BLOOD

Pepto-Mangan in Liquid or Tablets—a Blood Builder

Vigor and strength have as their base rich red blood. Blood is rich when there are plenty of red corpuscles. They are the tiny red cells which swim in blood and give it its color. Without red corpuscles blood would be white. When overwork, or straining, or illness weakens the blood, it diminishes the number of red cells. Without a sufficient number of red cells the blood becomes watery, the body weak. Vigor and strength fall off, so that physical life diminishes like a fading plant. The physical pleasures of eating and sleeping and exercise lose all attraction. There is no zest in living.

After Gude's Pepto-Mangan has been taken for a while the blood becomes rich with red cells. They help to nourish the entire system. With good blood at work there is a great difference in living. Eating, sleeping and exercise are enjoyed. All druggists sell Gude's Pepto-Mangan.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Way Lillian "Rescued" Bess Dean.

BESS DEAN was a pitiful looking specimen of femininity, indeed, as with Dicky on one side, and Ted— one of the Dicks—on the other, she tottered to the side of the car, and was hoisted—there is no other word to describe the movement, for she could not climb, and mutely refused to be lifted—into the tonneau. Lillian and I had alighted from the car as soon as we caught sight of her, and would have hurried toward her but for Dicky's peremptory hand waving us back.

"It's her feet, of course," Lillian murmured as she watched the painful process of the girl. "And the Dicky-birds right. The first thing to do is to get her off them, and we should only hinder him if we don't over there. And I'll bet you three cookies, sugar ones, that she won't admit her feet hurt. It'll be her head or her ears, or her hands anything but to give in that she shouldn't have forced her foot into these sneakers of yours."

In spite of my very real concern at the girl's appearance—her staring eyes set in her white face, her disheveled hair, her aspect of exhaustion—I could not help a little smile, instantly suppressed and unobserved by her, when I heard her first murmured words:

"Oh, my back!" she moaned. "I've wrenched it some way. Oh! How am I going to stand the journey home?" "Oh, don't worry," I said. "Robert Savarin promised, with chivalrous concern. He had heard Lillian's side and evidently accepted as truth the girl's complaint of her back. 'I think it really will be better to take the longer way round by the state road. It will be so much less jolting.'"

"No, no," Bess Dean expostulated agonizedly. "Take the very shortest road. Never mind the jolting. Just get me home as quickly as you can." Lillian lowered her voice to a murmur, turning her face to me.

"Don't Be a Fool!"

"She uses scissors and a knife and a big roll of gauze in one of the pockets of this car," she said. "I've got them out, unobtrusively, after we get in and slip them to me."

I nodded a comprehending assent, and she and I climbed into the tonneau with Bess Dean, Dicky taking the front seat with Robert Savarin, and Ted stretching himself on the running board, where he assured us laughingly, he preferred to ride. Lillian saw that from his position he could not see into the tonneau, then she spoke to the men in front.

"Just keep your eyes on the road ahead, boys," she commanded. "We're going to try to make Miss Dean more comfortable, and we don't need any spectators. Just start the car and let's be on our way."

"Right-o!" Dicky threw back, and the next minute we were speeding over the valley road, and Lillian had put her hand firmly on Bess Dean's, for the girl had started wildly in her seat with angry protesting eyes.

"Don't be a fool just because you know 'how,' she said, calmly. "No woman, unless she's an experienced mountain climber, can come down that road without killing her feet, and yours must be in terrible condition. Just put them up here and let me take off those shoes."

"I tell you it isn't my feet, it's my—" Bess Dean began.

"Of course it's your back," Lillian spoke soothingly as she would to a child. "But we can't help that till we get home, while I can relieve your feet. Be sensible now."

Why Bess Dean Protested.

She stooped and lifted one of the girl's feet from the floor of the car, propped it on a footstool which I had provided for Lillian's use, untied the strings of the sneaker and attempted to pull it off.

Bess Dean protested feebly at the lifting of her foot, but at the peeling of the sneaker, she gave a sharp little cry. "I was afraid of this," Lillian said. "That knife, Madge—open, please."

I handed her the knife, and very carefully she began to slit the cloth at the side of the shoe. Bess Dean made no further protest, having patiently reached the limit of her endurance, but she gave a sigh of relief when the shoe came off, and another when Lillian removed the second sneaker, after having been compelled to cut it also.

"Now for the stockings," Lillian said. "Will you have to cut them, too?" Bess Dean asked, dismayed, though she had made no objection to the cutting of my shoes, and I guessed that she had put on her best pair of silk hose for the expedition.

"It won't make any difference," Lillian retorted practically. "They're in ribbons already." A furtive glance of my own confirmed her statement.

Great holes gaped through the flimsy texture of the stockings, through which the swollen and chafed feet strained as if bursting. Truly, Bess Dean had paid dearly for her petty vanity about the size of her feet as compared to mine, and I felt a sharp sting of conscience, knowing that I was partly responsible for her plight. I had yielded only too readily—not gladly—to Dicky's demand that I give her the exact pair of sneakers for which she had asked, my own, instead of the extra, larger pair I had in my trunk.
